Meditation of the Week

I thought that being faithful was about becoming someone other than who I was ...and it was not until this project failed that I began to wonder if my human wholeness might be more useful to God than my exhausting goodness.

foundation for common dialog and healing. It is important to know a few things:

- ◆ This is a completely voluntary opportunity.
- ◆ We are committed to protecting the identity of those victimized.
- ◆ Our Conference Minister will facilitate the meeting after reviewing the file and answer questions.
- ◆ Numerous opportunities will exist after the meeting for ongoing conversation.

We need all KCC members to be in prayerful preparation for this important step.

Pat's Corner

Our Quarterly Meeting was well attended and there was good discussion and questions about some of the things we are looking forward to as well as some significant challenges we are facing. For those of you who were not present, my report is attached for your consideration. If you were not present at the meeting it will be helpful to read it before proceeding with the rest of this article.

For many people the logical question after my report is "How do we proceed?" and "What is the goal?"

One of the most important things that has happened since the meeting is the number of people who have called, e-mailed or stopped by to ask questions, share concerns and learn more about what we are proposing. PLEASE CONTINUE TO TALK WITH ME AND WITH OUR LEADERS.

The goal is to have a meeting with our Conference Minister Chuck Barnes that will provide an opportunity to answer long standing questions about what happened in the past. This will take place in the fall. The greatest frustration from that time was lack of information. For reasons that had NOTHING to do with KCC leadership, that did not happen. We have the opportunity to change that now and we are going to do just that. My experience in working with congregations in the aftermath of misconduct is that appropriate disclosure, no matter how long after the fact, provides a
